'THE THIEF' PROVES DECIDED SUCCESS BY POLI PLAYERS

Miss Jewel and A. H. Van Buren Score in Leading Roles.

No clearer test of the powers of a stock company can be imagined than Bernstein work of high dramatic and technical cleverness, "The Thief." which has been chosen by the Poll players as the vehicle for their talents the present week. It is worth while to record the success of their effort at the outset, to pay tribute to their extremely creditable performance in the presence of acting problems which would have been ignored by some and flouted by others. "The Thief" is one of the best things the company has done in Washington.

If Miss Jewel had been awaiting an If Miss Jewel had been awaiting an opportunity, she had it here, in the role of Marie-Louise Voysin, and she firmly seized it. As an emotional actress she is not to be dealt with lightly, as her "Madame X" had demonstrated previously; and she distinguished herself last night. Her powers are neither slender nor unevenly balanced, and when the audience last night saw the kittensh, playful little chatelaine of the first act transfigured by a paroxysm of grief and remorse in the second, it had as vivid display of her versatility as could be wished for.

be wished for.
"The Thief" is not new to Washington. It was played here three years ago by Kyrle Bellow and Effic Shannon, the latter having taken Miss Illinton's place in the cast. In comparison with that performance one finds the vitality, the strength, the "grip" of the piece unimpaired by the interpretation given it at Del'a.

dramas of the past few years have been able to do.

Aside from Miss Jewel's admirable performance, A. H. Van Buren gave a suave and clean-cut enactment of the husband. It is a role which shows his tatients in their best light, and it is distinctly in his characteristic metier. The role of Raymond Lagardes was assumed by Duncan Penwarden, capably and adequately, while Graham Velsey was abeen as the unhappy youth, Fernande Lagardes, wife of Richard and stepmother to the misjudged youth. Mark Kent enacted the role of the detective, M. Zambault, and all the other roles were played with smoothness and precision.

"The Thief" should be one of the most successful of the Poli productions, for it is one which has brought their portrayal of the Weymouth, makes been successful of the Poli productions, for it is one which has brought their powers.

GAYETY

The clever team of comedians, Thomas F. Smith and Frank F. Moore, are the feature of Gordon & North's entertaining burlesque known as "The Merry whirl," being presented at the Gayety this week. Two capacity houses accorded them a warm welcome yesterday. As the Clock and the Snowman, brought to life by the magic ring, and as the Scarcerow and the Thman, they repeat their success of last year. as the Scarccrow and the Tinman, they repeat their success of last year.

Assisting them are such well-known buriesquers as Bob Leonard, Eddie Foley. Emile Dufault, Lillian Fitzgeraid, Mabel DeNord, and Olivette Tremayne. The chorus is composed of two score or more good looking girls who have voices above the average.

Eddie Foley's dancing and the songs of Lillian Fitzgerald were particularly pleasing. Among the song hits are "Havana Bay," "The Green Grees Grew All Around," and "When I Waltz With You."

LYCEUM

John Hart is the real big gun at the Lyceum Theater this week. While the rest of the company playing "The Gay Widows" does its part, Hart comes in for the biggest amount of glory. Every time he appeared on the stage last night he was given a rousing reception. On several occasions the applause was so enthusiastic he was forced to respond with something "new" he had not been scheduled of the stage of O'Lucius Inswitchia Sinkhaspeared

In the first half, Hart takes the part of O'Lucius Ipswitchfi a Shakespearean actor, and in the last part General Dope. It was in this character that he made his greatest hit.

Some spicy songs were sung, and a number of racy jokes exploded. In the funmaking, Mr. Hart was ably assisted by James E. Dailey, who played the role of an Irish comedian; Joe Taylor, a Dutchman; and Max Ritter.

Mile. Sillber. Joseffo Rotello, Rosa Alarcon, and Grace Foster made a hit by their singing.

COSMOS

"The Hoodoo" is the premier offering at the Cosmos this week, produced capably by Robert H. Martin. It is cer-ably by Robert H. Martin. It is certain to be one of the season's most acceptable offerings. One of the clever musical acts of the year is Rand's comedy musical dogs, their tricks being of a highly original brand. The canines count, play bells and end with a "dog drama," full of fun.

Al Bartel, blackface pinnist, and Charles W. Littlefield, a mimic, also are seen in a concoction of mirth and melody. Bartel plays a plano while standing on his head, and does other things equally antipathetic to the accepted order of things. "Mary is a Grand Old Name" is sung by Miss Gertrude Dudley in a striking manner. The Austell Four, instrumentalists, have an act of real merit. "Love's Progress" is a feature of the moving picture series.

Don't forget the children.

Julia Murdock Says 'The Yankee Prince' Is Clever Show; Likes Rainey Pictures

Everybody in the Columbia Theater night, that "The Yankee Prince" was a George M. Cohan play. They lively patriotic air, and because, although the program said the scene was laid in the tea room of a London hotel, the Stars and Stripes were in evidence on the walls. That's the answer. George M. Cohan can no more write a musical comedy without the Stars and Stripes, than he can help having been born on the Fourth of July, or having been named for the greatest patriot of them all.

"The Yankee Prince" is one of those typically Cohangeque musical produce. "The Yankee Prince" is one of those typically Cohanesque musical productions without very much plot, but full of action. When the chorus is not singing, it is dancing. When it is doing neither of these, it is standing about looking very picturesque, and I'd like to congratulate the management of "The Yankee Prince" right here on the costumes that are worn both by the principals and the lesser participants in the play. All are handsome, and new, and extremely up to the minute, so far as styles go.

Tom Lewis the Star.

Tom Lewis, "the unknown," is the tar of the piece, but Miss Flora Russell crowds him closely for honors being a graceful dancer, and having a delightfully sweet voice, which is heard in a number of songs. The plot of the play concerns Steve Dailey (Tom Lewis), who is a prize fight promoter. His business in England is to meet the King, and to spend the remainder of his time hunting for his har.

Tom Lewis is a whole show in himself. He wanders through the three acts of the play in humorous style, getting a laugh every time he shows his corpulent self upon the stage. One of his best moments last night was his "alleged" curtain speech, through which he stuttered in speech, through of his best moments last night was his "alleged" curtain speech, through which he stuttered in a wholly amusing fashion. Nobody knew what he intended to say, or cared so long as Lewis was before the curtain amusing them.

"The Thief" presents the theme of a vain woman's extravagance in the presence of temptation, her restless longing for finery and her fear of losing the love of her husband unless she were gowned well. It is not a great play. It moves the beholder, however, with a sense of verity and realism which few dramas of the past few years have been able to do.

Aside from Miss Jewel's admirable performance, A. H. Van Buren gave a suave and clean-cut enactment of the husband. It is a role which shows his tatlents in their best light, and it is a distinctly in his characteristic metier. As the American girl whose parent has ordered that she marry an earl. Miss Flora Russell is charming and satisfying, both in her songs and dances. She sings a number of songs, including "I'm to Marry a Nobleman." "Yankee Prince" waltz. "The A-B-C's of U. S. A.." and contributes several graceful dances, H. Tyler Brooke has the Cohan role in "The Yankee Prince," which gives him opportunity for a number of characteristically Cohanesque songs and dances. The costermonger number, "I Say. Flo." is perhaps the most spirited chorus in the piece, though the "Yankee Characteristically Cohanesque songs and dances, The costermonger number, "I Say. Eighteen Musical Numbers.

There are eighteen musical numbers, which are delivered with snap and vivacity. The three scenes of the play are laid in the tearoom of the Savoy Hotel, London, the exterior of Windsor Castle, and the Fielding home in Chicago.
Like most of the Cohan plays, "The Yankee Prince" is full of genuine humer that is spontaneous, clean and sparkling. There isn't a dull minute in the entire production, the jokes are new, and the singing above the average.

ROBBED HIS FATHER

Facing a ferocious lion in the bush, knew the moment the curtain went after hunting dogs have trailed him to up, without consulting the program cover, fighting him at bay, and finally killing him with one shot, is a far different matter, when experiencing this knew it because the band played a excitement from a comfortable seat in a cool theater than when actually engaged in such a pursuit. Watching another lion creep closer and closer, from a distance of a hundred yards, winding the picture machine meanwhile, until he is shot dead within forty inches of the spot upon which the photographer stands, is an adventure which those who saw Paul Rainey African hunt pictures at the Belasco yesterday were perfectly willing to leave for some one else, being content to experience the lesser thrill of seeing the finished product of these operations,

History of Rainey Hunt.

The lecturer, Reginald Carrington, gave a lucid description of the pictures as they were thrown upon the screen. In introducing the first picture he gave a short history of Mr. Rainey's expedition into the depths of the Nairobi country. Rainey carried with him upon this campaign thirty-five white men, exclusive of his corps of photographers, his master of hounds, the hunters, and his guests. Besides was accompanied by 135 native porters, twenty dogs, and a carload of sheep, which were used for bait and provision.

The first picture showed the prep arations at Nairobi for the expedition. Here are depicted the safari on the march, the camels loaded with the camp equipment, the ford of the swiftly flowing Guasanero river, with native boys bathing therein, and the beginning of the long march across the desert.

Chasing Ostrich Chicks.

Another interesting picture was the one that showed the party in the pursuit of baby ostriches, depicting these same birds, six weeks later, as tame as barnyard chicks. The "bunny hug," the "bear cat wiggle," and the "turkey trot" are quite overshadowed by the exhibition of the "ostrich wig-gle," which was shown on its pative

Like most of the Cohan plays, "The Yankee Prince" is full of genuine human sparking. There isn't a dull minute in sparking. There isn't a dull minute in about the same fashion that human babies have a hable of doing.

The other members of the cost were, without exception, well selected, and the production as a whole is one of the Academy's most successful offerings of the remarkable lion hunt, in which nine magnificent members of the royalty of the animal kingdom were slain.

Accused of the theft of $100 from his father, Henry F. Taube, seventeen years old, of Cleveland, Ohio, was arrested here this morning by Policeman Moran, of the Fifth precinct, as a fugitive from justice. According to the police, Taube admitted the charge. "There was $600 there, but I only had the nerve to take $100 of it," Taube told the police, they say. "It's almost all gone now, but I sure had a good time spending it."

Young Taube left Cleveland about September 1. The following day his father, who is a prosperous truck farmer on the outskirts of Cleveland, discovered that $100 was missing from his safe. He swore out a warrant charging his son with stealing the money.

After visiting several cities, Taube came to Washington to see his brother, who is a sailor on the United States tug Triton, which runs between Indian Head and this city. The boy spent money so freely that his brother became suspicious, and wrote his father, mission on waterways, composed on the says it special sort" of a chicken, so blood is concerned.

INTERNATIONAL FALLS, Minn. Sept. 17.—The international joint commission on waterways, composed of representatives of the United States and Canadian governments, met here today for a hearing in connection with the question of the levels of the Lake of the Woods and tributary waters.

The commission will determine whether 't is desirable to fix the levels of the lake, which is on the international boundary. The decision will be of much importance, since it will affect the dams and other works in the Rainy river, which empties into the lake, and the Winnipeg river, which drains it.

FEATURE OF BILL

and Instrumental Numbers by Company of Twenty.

Featuring Gus Edwards' "Kabaret Kids," the bill at Chase's new home of polite vaudeville is one evenly balanced and one that met with approval at the opening performances. There are several new acts on the program, and some which have been seen in Washington in seasons gone by. In the Edwards "Kabaret Kids" number the noted song writer, as is to be expected of an Edwards production, has gathered together about twenty kidlets who sing, dance, and act in true kidlet's fashion. The violin number, by Betty Washington, the "What Ja' Ma' Call 'Im' dance, by Jou Edwards, and the vocal numbers, by Hattle Kneitel, are worthy of special mention.

Taylor, assisted by Ivy Benton, George
D. Baker, and Lawrence Grattan, appear in "Just Married," which keeps things going at a lively and boisterous pace for fully twenty minutes. Another sketch, seen here before, is that of Mae Elwood and James Devlin, who give their novel farcical number, "The Girl From Yonkers," in which a city chap is made the dupe of a rural maid with a "taking" way.
